Sephardi Voices UK: Sharing the Stories of Sephardi Jews in Britain
Series: In Her Majesty's Kingdom - Celebrating the Rich History of Anglo-Jewry

Sephardi Voices UK documents the testimonies of Jews from the Middle East, North Africa and Iran who now live in the United Kingdom. Our filmed interviews document the fascinating history, rich culture and vibrant traditions of the communities our interviewees left behind. Our work allows the families of our interviewees to connect with their past, whilst simultaneously allowing both researchers and members of the general public a window into the histories of these unique communities.

Less than 10% of British Jews have their roots in the Middle East, North Africa or Iran. Despite this relatively small number, Middle Eastern, North African and Iranian Jews have made a large impact on British society. Amongst our interviewees are prominent business people, authors, artists, politicians, musicians, physicians, Rabbis and philanthropists. In this lecture we will introduce the SVUK archive, and learn about the

Hebrew University Gets Large Shipment of Books

The Hebrew University Library of Jerusalem received forty-seven cases of books through the Library Committee of the Zionist Organization of America, of which Dr. David Klein is secretary. Since the Zionist Organization has taken over the management of the library, the number of readers and the general interest of the public in the library has increased tremendously.

The screenshot displays a webpage for Shavuot. At the top, there is a blue header with the title 'Shavuot' and a small image of a field. Below the header, there is a section titled 'Ro'im Kolot' with a video player showing a person reading a scroll. The video has a quote: 'They were in a place where all was one, where all was united, and therefore the same way that you can see a sign.' Below the video, there is a section 'Shavuot in the National Library Collections' with a paragraph of text. This is followed by 'Shavuot in Photographs', which features a carousel of four photo thumbnails with titles like 'A Tractor Parade at Moshav Bahad', 'Dancing at Kibbutz Hazerim', 'Celebrating the First Plosh', and 'Shavuot at Kibbutz Saverim'. Below the photos is a 'More photos' section. The next section is 'Shavuot Songs', which shows four song thumbnails with titles like 'Sabbath al Hakevayim', 'Vibag Shavuot Te'ash', 'Shibolei Be'yadah', and 'Eretz Zavat Hailav U'vash'. The final section is 'Stories from the National Library of Israel Blog', featuring four article thumbnails with titles like 'Sowing Seeds... from the Sublime to the Ridiculous', 'The Mysterious Behind the...', 'So What's the Deal with...', and 'How France Really...'. The page is clean and organized, with clear navigation and content sections.

The Book That Survived Kristallnacht and Made It to the Land of Israel

Home > Germany the Jews and Israel > The Book That Survived Kristallnacht and Made It to the Land of Israel Diaspora

A battered copy of “In the Heart of the Seas,” rescued from anti-Semitic riots in Germany, was returned to its author, S.Y. Agnon, with a letter telling the incredible story of its survival

Stefan Litt
01.02.2017

The day after Kristallnacht, November 11, 1938

In the cultured, sophisticated environment of Germany's Weimar Republic in the 1920s and early 1930s, Jews made up an integral part of German society, experiencing the best that the country had to offer. When the Nazi Party took control of Germany in 1933, life as the Jewish community knew it was quickly brought to an end.

On November 3rd, 1938, a young Jewish man named Herschel Grynszpan, in an apparent reaction to his family's deportation from their home in Germany to Poland, shot a German diplomat in Paris where he was living at the time.
